

Protecting People from Themselves

Liberty should be maximised. But sometimes people should be protected from themselves. Because I'm not an island in terms of character and stupidity. Sado-masochism should be illegal if it leads to hospitalisation, broken bones or death or psychological trauma or if it is based on coercion. Make a distinction between forcibly protecting people from themselves - simply attempting to do so through persuasion - not acting at all.