

Secularism and Pornography

Pornography in itself is harmless. If harm was involved in its production that harm is not happening any more - it is in the past. It is how people let themselves respond to it that can be the problem.

Secularism and Prostitution

The secularist must not see prostitution as bad in itself. It is possible to be a happy prostitute and spread happiness to the clients. Why let people have casual sex when the profit is fun and pleasure and then ban them from doing it for money as well?

The concern for the secularist to make sure that no intolerable exploitation is taking place. For example, there are many young women endangering themselves by becoming prostitutes and working the streets.
